4. The purpose, methods and legal grounds of data control

- 4.1. The data control on behalf of Data controller is generally based on voluntary content as well as for the purpose of the preparation and performance of the contract to be established between Data controller and Data subject. In case of a data control based on voluntary consent, data subjects are entitled to revoke their consent any time in the course of the data control. In some cases the control, storage and forwarding of the provided personal data is prescribed by the law, of which the clients will be informed separately. We inform the persons providing the data that if the data provided by them is not considered to be their own personal data, it is the obligations of that person to obtain permission from the Data subject.
- 4.2. The control of the personal data may take place in order to fulfill an obligation prescribed by the law of the European Union and the Hungarian law.
- 4.3. In some given cases, Data controller is entitled to control the personal data of Data subject for the purpose of the enforcement of the rightful interest of Data controller or a third party. In that case Data controller shall make a so-called test of interests, which records and examines whether the rightful interest of Data controller proportionally restricts the right of Data subject to the protection of personal data, its privacy or rather how to maintain a balance between the interests of Data controller and Data subject.

- 4.4. If the data is collected by Data controller from Data subject and Data subject does not provide the personal data controlled based on the legal grounds listed hereinabove, then the lack of providing of the data may result in the unfeasibility of the establishment of implementation of the contract, or the unfeasibility of the given data control measure of Data controller. If Data subject only provides some of the required data then it shall be examined based on the data not provided thoroughly whether the lack of the providing of the data may result in the unfeasibility of the establishment of the implementation of the contract. The legal consequences of the unfeasibility may only be made use of by Data controller, if it is able to certify that the contract may not be performed by it without the data to be provided.
